ABSTRACT

The National Diffusion Network (NDN) was established to bring together representatives of federal, state, and local agencies to promote widespread adoption of new and innovative programs within and across state boundaries. The goal in publishing this directory is to help local educators solve problems through program improvements gleaned from other districts. The information gathered on each project is divided into two parts. The first part includes project name, address, phone number; project personnel, responsibilities, and percent time spent on developer/demonstrator project; and dissemination funding. The second part includes addresses and contact persons for demonstration and turnkey sites. (Author/LD)

INTRODUCTION

Over the past year, numerous requests from State Facilitators, Developer/Demonstrators, and United States Office of Education staff have pointed to the need for an additional network tool -- an internal National Diffusion Network Developer/Demonstrator Directory supplementing the content information contained in Educational Programs That Work. This directory has been produced in looseleaf format with the idea that NDN members may wish to include it in their looseleaf EPTW notebook.

All JDRP-approved projects were contacted in August requesting completion of a simple form identifying staff, expected dissemination funding level, and demonstration and turnkey sites. Information secured was checked by ED Materials/Support Center staff, calls were made (as necessary) to clarify information, and information sheets were retyped and printed. Single copies will be mailed to all State Facilitators and Developer/Demonstrator projects and will be available upon request to non-funded JDRP projects. The table of contents lists those projects completing forms in time for the September printing and mailing. Project entries are organized alphabetically. As additional projects submit information, their sheets will be inserted at the end of the appropriate alphabetical sections. Additions or corrections will be summarized on a special addendum sheet.

The information gathered on each project is divided into two parts: the first includes project name, address, phone number; project personnel, responsibilities, and percent time on D/D project; and dissemination funding -- NDN and/or other sources. The second includes addresses and contact persons for demonstration and turnkey sites (other than the home site) identified by each D/D project and a notation whether it is necessary to make initial contact through the D/D site. Compilation and distribution of these two types of information was designed to meet the needs expressed to the ED Center staff. We hope this publication will increase internal network communication making it possible to more quickly identify staff members and to locate nearby sites for demonstration and training purposes. Revision suggestions are welcomed! Please contact Janice Hunt at the ED Materials/Support Center, 1855 Folsom Street, San Francisco, CA 94103.

What Is The NDN?

The National Diffusion Network (NDN) is an expanding nationwide system that offers proven educational alternatives to meet the needs of school-age youngsters and those who educate them.

NDN's goal is to help local educators solve pressing problems more swiftly, efficiently, and economically through program improvement efforts. The NDN links local school districts, intermediate service agencies, and state departments of education--within and across state boundaries--so that programs developed in one district and proven effective can be used in other districts facing similar challenges. Two groups of participants--State Facilitators (SFs) and Developer/Demonstrators (D/Ds)--have received funding from the U.S. Office of Education (USOE) to assist schools that are searching for ways to improve their programs.

SFs, located in all 50 states, are tuned to the needs of school districts in their own states. SFs carefully match the interests of local schools with exemplary programs. They survey school needs within their states, review programs that seem likely to meet those needs, and help arrange information exchanges, staff training, delivery of material resources, and implementation assistance--in close coordination with D/Ds. SFs may also provide other information services, organizational planning for change, and problem-solving help to schools.

D/Ds provide training and help for schools as they adopt or adapt one of these new educational programs or processes. Each program continues at its original location, but federal funds enable the project's staff to work with educators elsewhere who show keen interest in adopting or adapting the validated program. Each adopting district receives training and coordination help to assure that the key program elements will actually work in the new location.

Additional information about the NDN may be secured by writing the Division of Educational Replication, U.S. Office of Education, ROB 3, Room 3616, 400 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, D.C. 20202.
